That went on for awhile and then he started doing some work once we had convincing that he will have play time with the dinosaurs, he did some work, but still continue to fall on the ground and hitting on the table and refusing to do work.

Around 9:40am I took him to a musical activity in the undercover area, he was really good during the musical activity, he was dancing and being happy, he wanted to stand up and dance along the to music but the had to sit downs during the activity but he was very happy, excited and wa enjoying him self.

After the musical activity it was recess, he had his recess and ate his food and enjoy the brake .
After recess it was time for science which was around 11pm, during science class I realise he was incontinent with faeces, took him to the toilet and put him on the toilet just to see if he wanted to finish but said no. So I clean him up, changed his clothes, and the other support worker went home to get some more cloths for him while I was taking care of alex. Just before science's class, he had another episode.
Alex the other support worker ordered his pizza for him and went and picked it around 12pm, he came and we hand him to, and then around 12:30 I took him to Autism association, he was fine at the time, when I dropped him off and explain .
When I picked him up from autism Association around 3:50pm they told me he had another incident with faeces there as well, and he was refusing to be changed but they managed to change him. I asked for jumper to put on his chair just in case of anything happens again while on the way home he had another incident, when we reached home I took him to the shower. He looked having a loss bowel motion (diarrhoea), and then we sat on the couch plyed with his iPad for a little bit, but he kept going off and on, and then we went outside sit down next to the water at the back and play outside with the scooter for a bit and the came back inside, I went to pick some lemons outside. while I was there he had taken off his cloths because he had wet i think while he was trying to drink some water and changed his cloths and then signed off
