The request was made through Blake on Thursday but turned out, no support worker came for Sarah. This resulted in, according to Caroline, Sarah walking from work to home. Reviewing through the CareView and discussing the matter to Janine, turned out that several call attempts was made for Sarah along with a message to get details about the support worker however, there was no response from Sarah's end. This was further attested by Alex who also tried to get through Sarah. Further, Janine and I had a discussion about how to address this concern as getting a support worker just to drive Sarah home on a weekend is not a financially sound decision to spend the NDIS funding. Support Worker costs around $400 compared to Uber which costs $25. I have mentioned the option to Sarah but insisted to maintain that support because she cannot afford any out of pocket expenses such as Uber. Ways forward will be follow up NDIS about the change of core funding management from NDIA managed to Plan Managed; While on process, Sarah will be trained to log on her portal so she can facilitate her own payment.
