Hi Megan,
Please see the price increase for Noah's swimming lessons. I am really struggling and confused with things going on I am waiting on updates regards to kids are kids and Avivo reports. And this is a big reason why I have accepted whatever we get given in the past as this is all over my head without absolutely everything else that is going on at the moment. Sorry that this is taking longer than I expected.
Thanks
Bianca

Hi Bianca,

Please disregard this email that was automatically sent. Because we have to do separate invoicing through another system for NDIS, we have to manually match it to this system.

Also, so that you are aware, our pricing structure for private lessons has changed and we can no longer offer our privates at the reduced rate of $40 per class. From the 1st March the price has changed to $56 per lesson however this will only affect your from when this current package is finished. In other words, your March lessons up to what you have paid for (23/3 including the extra week for the lockdown) will remain unchanged.

Kind regards,

Katii

Good Morning

As Noah's karate instructor, I have been asked for my recommendation for his ongoing support for his private classes. This is a must for Noah to be able to keep up with his peers in his group sessions.

On his "bad days" it is extremely hard for him to be able to concentrate and continue joining in. He tends to collapse into a safe ball, reaches out for comfort and support. He is also gets extremely nervous and starts to suck his lips, withdraws, and at times starts to stomp his feet if he does not understand the drill that we are about to do. This then disrupts the rest of the class as I try and calm him down. I have also noticed that he has hyper mobility issues which we address in his group class and a lot in his private. I use the private lessons to prep him for the class ahead and work on stances and kata and technique and work on any other issues that we may have come up in the group classes.
